

Bound for Glory on ESPN

Larry Santora MD, Rina Santora RN, and Craig Minegar, of The Orange County Heart Institute, performed heart screening tests on the football players of Montour High School in McKees Rock, Pennsylvania, for the “Bound for Glory” reality TV show. Dick Butkus, NFL legend and star of Bound for Glory, asked his cardiologist, Dr. Santora, to screen his players for heart disease. The Orange County Heart Institute’s Heart Screening For Athletes Program, uses echocardiograms and EKG to screen high school athletes for congenital heart disease.

The latest series from Actual Reality Pictures featuring Dick Butkus as head coach/"savior" of a perennial loser high school football team. Series follows Butkus as he attempts to resurrect the schools spirits and turn the football team into a big-time program. Coach Butkus is assisted by friends in the sports and celebrity world in everything from teaching cheerleaders to creating new uniforms.

Premieres Tuesday, September 20, 2005 at 10pm EDT/7pm PDT on ESPN. Bound for Glory also airs on ESPN2 Wednesdays at 12:30AM EDT/9:30PM PDT and on ESPN U Wednesdays at 8pm EDT/9PM PDT and Thursdays at 11PM EDT/8PM PDT.
